

Luke Roy, MSN, FNP-BC, CEN – Luke Roy is board-certified

Family Nurse Practitioner currently in the role of Sepsis Nurse Practitioner at Sharp Grossmont Hospital. In addition to providing and managing direct care of sepsis and infectious disease patients, this role includes planning, directing, and coordinating the development and implementation of initiatives to reduce mortality and improve outcomes among patients with sepsis. Luke graduated from Azusa Pacific University with a Master of Science in Nursing/Family Nurse Practitioner degree with honors in 2018. His thesis was identifying effective strategies for sepsis screening in primary care. Luke's nursing background and experience is in emergency nursing. At Sharp Grossmont Hospital Luke chairs the Sepsis Task Force and Sepsis Champion groups. Achievements have included leading the Sharp Grossmont sepsis team in obtaining a C.O.R.E.

award under the quality pillar for sepsis mortality reduction and disease specific certification from the Joint Commission for the sepsis program. Clinical interests include antimicrobial stewardship, non-invasive fluid responsiveness technology, and early sepsis detection modalities. Outside of work Luke enjoys sailing, travel, gardening, and spending time with family and friends.
